The Indian Economy in mutation

Chairperson

FRANÇOISE LEMOINE, Senior economist, CEPII

In 2008-2009, India's growth has been hampered by the global financial crisis, but the Indian economy has withstood the shock and a V-shaped recovery continued in 2010 with a growth rate of between 8.5% and 9.4% according to estimates.

However, India still faces challenges to ensure its long-term growth: to modernize its infrastructure, create jobs, implement structural reforms, improve the living standards of the poorest, finance growth, manage debt service, etc..

What is the economic and financial strategy of the government in a context of fragile global recovery and high domestic inflation? What are the prospects for medium-term, particularly compared to China?

On the occasion of his visit to Paris, Saumitra CHAUDHURI, member since 2009 of the Planning Commission, and, since 2005 of the group of economic advisers to the Prime Minister of India, will present how the Indian authorities analyze the world situation and try to manage the impact on the Indian economy.
